STATE FUNERAL FOR BORAH MONDAY

Ohio V. F. W. Arrive for 2-Day Meeting

Mercury Rises, But Still Near Zero Mark in City

Marion was slowly returning to normal today after a siege of Arctic cold, but still shivered in near-zero temperatures.

Lowest point on Weatherman E. H. Raffensperger's thermometer last night was three degrees below zero, which was warm in comparison with the 15 below of early yesterday. The highest point reached yesterday was 1 below. At noon the thermometer registered five above. A year ago the mercury ranged between 36 and 14 degrees above.

The government weather bureau forecasts continued cold for tonight, Sunday and Monday, with partly cloudy weather tonight and Sunday and light snow tonight.

Throughout the state temperatures went back above the zero mark today, but the weather was still the principal topic of conversation. Weatherman Raffensperger counted 96 telephone calls from Marionites yesterday and the phone was still ringing when he went to bed last night.

Coal Dealers Busy

Marion coal dealers generally reported business good as householders stoked their furnaces against the cold. A checkup showed that there is no danger of a coal shortage.

Snow flurries came to Marion and several other points in the state today along with the higher temperatures.

The state highway department said snow was drifting in the Sandusky bay bridge area, and advised caution there. Otherwise it said roads were in good shape.

The East Ohio Gas Co. continued curtailed service to many northeastern Ohio industrial plants in order to divert pressure to residential users. Several thousand men were sent home from the plants yesterday; today was a regular "day off" in many of them, and operations were not so much affected.

More than a score of deaths from exposure in the northern states, ice skating in southern Louisiana, freezing temperatures in sunny Florida and a bitter chill from the Rockies to the Atlantic emphasized today the intensity and scope of the nation's cold wave.

At least 112 deaths were attributed directly or indirectly to the frigid weather in 30 states this week.

Lower temperatures were in prospect for much of the east and south tonight.

Louisiana State university students skated on the campus for the first time in history. Minimum temperatures of near zero were expected on the gulf coast as the cold wave penetrated deeper into the southland.

The bitter and protracted chill halted much shipping on inland waterways, menaced grain and fruit crops, and added to the hardship of the poor and homeless.

Early today the mercury dropped five degrees below freezing at Jacksonville, Fla., and touched 39 at Tampa. Citrus growers and truck farmers, fearing serious damage to their crops, prepared to use smudge pots.

SLOW, STEADY RISE RECORDED

The slow rise in temperatures which began yesterday morning continued throughout the day and last night, according to the recording thermometer in the Erie railroad yards here.

At 7 a. m. yesterday the thermometer listed 18 degrees below zero, the coldest point of the current cold wave. The temperature gradually rose from that time until 10 a. m. today when it stood at 10 degrees above zero.

Due to differences in atmospheric conditions, the Erie thermometer does not record the same temperatures as the official thermometer of Weatherman E. H. Raffensperger. Last night, for example, it registered several degrees higher than the official temperature.

The hour-by-hour readings starting at 10 a. m. yesterday were:

10 a. m., 10 below; 11 a. m., 10 below; noon, 6 below; 1 p. m., 4 below. 2 p. m. to 8 p. m., 2 below; 9 p. m. to midnight, zero. 1 a. m. today to 4 a. m., 2 above; 5 a. m., 4 above; 6 a. m., 4 above; 7 a. m., 5 above; 8 a. m., 6 above; 9 a. m., 8 above.

Garage Fire At Delaware Causes Loss of $50,000

Others in State Result in 4 Deaths; Homes Damaged Here.

Fires, many the result of overheating to combat the sub-zero weather, brought death to four persons and injury to three others in Ohio.

At Delaware fire caused between $40,000 and $50,000 damage at the Humphries Motor Sales today.

In Marion damage of $800 and $200 was caused at two West Side residences.

A family of seven at Upper Sandusky was routed from home by a $200 fire.

Three persons burned to death in a rural Michigan home.

Delaware Garage Swept by Flames

Special to The Star

DELAWARE, Jan. 20—Damage tentatively estimated at between $40,000 and $50,000 was caused early today when fire swept through the Harry Humphries Motor Sales building in downtown Delaware, damaging or destroying 21 automobiles.

The building also was badly damaged, the roof and walls of the rear part caving in.

The damage estimate was made by Leo Wilson of Delaware, owner of the building, and Mr. Humphries, who operates the Ford agency in Delaware.

The fire broke out at about 5 a. m. and was brought well under control some five hours later. Fire Chief Clive Dall directed the fight, with about 10 firemen taking part. Origin of the fire is undetermined but it is believed it may have started from an overheated stove in the rear of the building which suffered the most damage.

Cold weather hampered the firemen, most of whom were coated with ice as they battled in zero temperatures.

Much of the damage came to privately-owned automobiles which had been stored there to keep them warm. Four new Ford cars in the front of the building were damaged by smoke and water.

For a time it appeared the flames would spread, but firemen kept it confined to the one structure, a long, narrow building. One house at the rear is only two or three feet from the garage and was continually sprayed with water. An alley separates the building from others to the west.

The building was two stories high at the front and one story at the rear.

Two Marion Homes Damaged by Fire

A fire blamed to an overheated chimney and another which firemen said resulted from an overheated stove pipe late yesterday resulted in approximately $1,000 damage at two homes here.

The Charles Ramsey home at 282 Senate street was gutted by flames shortly before 4 p. m. after an overheated stove pipe ignited a partition in the kitchen and then spread to partitions in second floor rooms, firemen reported. Loss was estimated at $800.

The entire interior of the home was badly damaged. First floor ceilings and second floor partitions were destroyed and it was necessary for fireman to rip off most of the roof in order to extinguish flames that had spread up partitions and ignited timbers under the roof.

Mrs. Ramsey was on the first floor when the fire broke out but did not realize the house was burning because the flames were confined within the partitions and did not break out until they reached the second floor. Chief McFarland said. Neighbors who saw the smoke pouring from the roof and upstairs windows noti-

WINTER FOOD PLEA MADE FOR BIRDS

With the mercury bouncing below the zero mark and stoking the furnace tops in indoor sports, Marion residents are asked not to forget the birds. The only food available now, nature lovers point out, is what is provided by their friends. "We know," said one friend of these hyper little creatures, "that many people do make a practice of feeding them throughout the winter, but there are many to be fed and food requested by the birds this season will come in mighty good right now," she said.

BALL TONIGHT FIRST FEATURE

Governor and National Commander on Program of 2-Day Meeting.

Marion put out its best "welcome" mat today for the men, women and young people here to attend the annual midwinter state conference of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

What the final registration count will be could not be forecast at noon by those in charge of registering the visitors at Hotel Harding, conference headquarters.

Until Thursday, when King Winter cracked down on Ohio, it was expected that about 800 persons would be here by Sunday and that there would be approximately 400 persons at the banquet tonight.

About 200 members of the department and auxiliary had arrived in Marion at noon today. Although several hundred more were expected this afternoon, only about 225 of the number have made reservations for the banquet tonight.

Among the first to greet the visitors upon their arrival at the hotel were Thomas L. Hurley, commander of Veterans Post 3313 of Marion, and Mrs. Esther Bowersock, president of the auxiliary. As heads of the two senior V. F. W. groups here, they were their organizations' official hosts.

The banquet at Masonic temple and the grand military ball afterwards at Hotel Harding will be the social highlights of the conference, which will be devoted for the most part to schools of instruction for commanders, adjutants, quartermasters, service officers and membership, employment and publicity chairmen and to sessions of the councils of administration of the department and auxiliary.

Tonight's Honor Guests.

Commander-in-Chief Otis N. Brown of Greensboro, N. C., expected to arrive here at 4:30 this afternoon for his first official visit to Ohio, and Governor John W. Bricker will be in the spotlight of attention at the banquet tonight.

Commander Brown, forced to give up plans to fly here because of weather conditions, was to come by train. A motorcycle escort of state patrolmen and city police was to meet him at the Union depot. Governor Bricker, scheduled to arrive by automobile at 5:30 p. m. will be met at the Harding memorial by the motorcycle escort.

The ball will be open to the public. Bob McMahon's orchestra has been engaged to play for dancing, starting at 9. At 10 Commander Brown and Mrs. Cecilia Carnicom of Walbridge, O., president of the state auxiliary, will lead the grand march. Semi-

HERBERT OVERRULES FERGUSON ON BILL

Holds Auditor Is on Wrong Course in Richwood Case.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 20—Atty. Gen. Thomas J. Herbert held today that State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson had no right to hold up payment on a $700 purchase of dried sweet corn from a company in which State Fire Marshal Ray Gill formerly was an officer.

Herbert said that since the purchase was made for the Massillon state hospital and not for Gill's department, it was not covered by a statute prohibiting a state official from having a personal interest in a state transaction.

Herbert, pointing out that the corn was bought through competitive bidding, said that in 1937 and 1938 huge quantities were bought at prices up to 50 per cent higher "without any semblance of competitive bidding."

These purchases were approved by Ferguson although competitive bidding was required, Herbert added.

"It is gratifying to observe," the attorney general remarked, "that the auditor is now insisting that the laws governing awarding of contracts for purchase of supplies be followed."

The corn was bought from the Hostetter company of Richwood.

Galion Foremen's Group Entertain Here for Wives

What Rome was to the ancient world and what England has been to the world of today the United States will be the world of tomorrow, Arthur C. Horrocks of Brecksville, O., educational director for the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. and president of the National Association of Foremen predicted in a talk given last night at Hotel Harding at the annal "ladies night" dinner party of the Galion Iron Foremen's club, an affiliate of the national organization. Fifty members and guests attended, including Henry Evans of Akron, national secretary, and Mrs. Evans.

To support his prediction Mr. Horrocks said that today the nation is the largest creditor nation the world has even seen—"quietly and without any fanfare the international banking office has moved across the Atlantic from London, England, to America"—and that the problems of the United States are those of superfluity—"we are the greatest blessed nation in the world."

Tea, rubber, coffee and tin are the only things this country is lacking, he said, but scientists can produce synthetic rubber at a cost of from 36 to 38 cents a pound, tea and coffee can be raised here and a recent geological survey party reported abundant supplies of tin under one of the national parks.

Doesn't Fear Communists

"I'm not afraid of communists," Mr. Horrocks declared. "We don't have them. They may call themselves that but they aren't. A man who has two pairs of shoes, two shirts and two pairs of pants is not a communist, and many of our self-styled communists have their own cars. That's not communism and when you hold them up before a mirror they're not followers of Lenin and Stalin."

Speaking of Americans feeling for their country, he said: "There is a definite return to patriotism, not the flag waving kind, but the kind that is made on the very basis of our nation."

Mr. Horrocks deplored this country's never being entangled in the European war or in making munitions. "I hope we never will have to reorganize our machines to make war materials," he said. "When a war goes out of business we have a whole new army of prospects to find before we get a few customers and it takes years to get back what we lost when we started to make the implements of war. I hope we won't see war and we [illegible]

Pope Says Chances for Quick Peace Now Are Remote

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20—Pope Pius XII advised President Roosevelt today the the immediate chances for peace were reduced to a "slight probability" by "stubborn obstacles" which "become daily more difficult to surmount."

The pontiff called upon the "friends of peace" to "visualize" the seriousness of these obstacles and the improbability of cessation of war "so long as the present state of the opposing forces remains essentially unchanged."

These expressions and a hope for the eventual attainment of peace were made in a letter to the president, a reply to a communication of Dec. 23 in which Mr. Roosevelt disclosed he was sending to the Pope a personal representative, Myron C. Taylor, to assist in "our parallel endeavors for peace."

It bespoke a "providential help," his holiness said, when the President at Christmas time placed himself in the vanguard "of those who would promote peace" and succor the victims of war.

"It is, the pontiff declared, "an exemplary act of fraternal and hearty solidarity between the new and the old world in defense against the chilling breath of aggressive and deadly Godless and anti-Christian tendencies, that threaten to dry up the fountainhead, whence civilization has come and drawn its strength."

In such circumstances, the Pope said, using the plural pronoun as in all papal utterances, "we shall find a special satisfaction" in receiving a personal representative from Mr. Roosevelt.

His holiness chose to ignore criticism by some protestants in this country that Taylor's mission appeared to be a step toward a union of church and state. Taylor, now in Florida, has not indicated when he will sail.

Admits Steering Auto, But Denies He Was Driving

A test case to determine whether a motorists steering a car is actually operating the vehicle locmed here today as a result of the conviction of Raymond R. Kurtz, 47, of Agosta on a drunken driving charge in municipal court yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Kurtz was found guilty of the charge following a hearing but Carter M. Patton, attorney for Mr. Kurtz, said he planned to appeal the case to common pleas court. During the hearing, Mr. Patton insisted his client was steering but not operating a car at the time of the arrest.

State patrolmen who arrested Mr. Kurtz near Agosta Dec. 29 testified that he was steering a car being pushed by another auto.

Officials said the attorney general has given opinions on the point but that they could not recall a ruling by a higher court on the question.

100 FACE PROSPECT OF COURT SUMMONS

Many Fail To Heed Call for Traffic Violations.

Municipal court officials today made plans to issue summons to nearly 100 motorists who have failed to report in traffic court in the last two weeks.

Expressing disappointment that only a handful of the 94 motorists scheduled to appear in traffic court yesterday reported, Municipal Judge Hazen this morning said that unless the others report by the first of the week the court will issue summons for them to appear.

"Probably the extremely cold weather kept many of the people at home and we want to give them a fair chance," Judge Hazen said. "However, it's not fair to fine a few violators and forget about the others," he added.

Court officials pointed out that failure to report when summoned may result in citation and arrest for contempt of court.

SENATE TO PAY ITS TRIBUTE IN CAPITAL RITES

President and Cabinet, Supreme Court, Foreign Diplomats Will Attend.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20—Senate leaders arranged today to hold a state funeral Monday for Senator William Edgar Borah, its dean in point of service, who died last night of a cerebral hemorrhage.

President Roosevelt and members of the cabinet, supreme court and diplomatic corps will attend.

The White House announced the President's intention to be present shortly after plans for the state funeral were definitely decided upon.

The funeral services will be held at 12:30 p. m. and will be directed by the Rev. Ze Barney T. Phillips, senate chaplain.

Borah's body will be taken back to his home state of Idaho for burial at Boise City. Senator D. Worth Clark, Idaho's junior senator, said that the people of that state have asked Mrs. Borah to consent to another state funeral at Boise City, Friday. She had the request under consideration.

Escort of Senators

Eight senators, it was understood, will be chosen to escort the bier west, leaving here at 8 p. m. Monday.

Arrangements for the state funeral here were completed today at the conference of Senators Clark; Barkley, Democrat of Kentucky, and McNary, Republican of Oregon with Mrs. Borah.

Many members of the diplomatic corps are expected to attend since Borah was active in foreign affairs, having served during Republican administrations as chairman of the senate foreign relations committee.

The 74-year-old Idaho statesman, known in the senate as an isolationist in personal as well as international affairs, slipped away in sleep at 8:43 p. m.

Nearby was his wife, Mary, who was known as "Little Borah." She had kept a constant vigil over her husband since last Tuesday. It was then that the Idahoan fell in his apartment bathroom and a cerebral hemorrhage blotted out his consciousness.

Leader of historic battles against American participation in the League of Nations and the World court, Borah "the great apostate," was mourned by high officialdom and many a common man.

President Roosevelt, whose foreign policies often brought Borah's ringing denunciation in the senate, declared that "we shall miss him and mourn him and long remember the superb courage which was his."

All Call Him Friend

Borah's colleagues sadly spoke their words of praise, and there was none who did not refer to him as a friend.

Borah's death had been a question of time since his fall. Then, Mrs. Borah wondered why he was late for breakfast, finally called him in vain and discovered his unconscious form.

His head was crushed, and for some time physicians feared his back was broken. Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.), who cried unashamedly, said: "He never had a chance."

Borah never regained sufficient consciousness to explain what had happened. Medical authorities said it was impossible to ascertain whether he suffered a stroke and fell or whether the brain hemorrhage resulted from the fall.

Death Comes Like Sleep

The Idaho veteran, whose resale speeches always drew crowded galleries and a large attendance of his colleagues, died peacefully and without pain, Miss Cora Rubin, his secretary for more than

Marion Woman to Begin Sixth Year in Pulpit Sunday

REV. LILLIE SWICK.

First Church of God on Silver street Sunday will celebrate the beginning of her sixth year of the pastorate of Rev. Lillie Swick, Marion's only ordained woman minister.

Young people of the church have arranged a surprise program at the morning worship service. Special recognition will be given the new board of trustees, L. A. Webb of Marion, Francis Kibler of Green Camp and Paul Kennedy of near Marseilles; the new secretary, Raymond Swick, husband of the pastor; the new treasurer, Ernest Mahler; the Sunday school superintendent, Mr. Swick; the Sunday school secretary, Miss Luella Davidson, and the pianist, Miss Mildred Brammer.

Sunday night Rev. Swick will deliver a sermon on "Looking Forward."

Reviewing the last five years of her work, Rev. Swick today expressed her appreciation to the individuals, business places and other churches for their support of her work.

First Church of God has grown from a group Rev. Swick organized in 1934 in a room on Fountain street. It was known as the Undenomination Lime City Gospel mission. After being called to Church of God work, Rev. Swick established Second church and in Jan. of 1936 when First and Second churches merged she took over the work, using the First church building at Henry and Congress street. First services in the present church were held on Aug. 9, 1936.

She was ordained to the ministry in the fall of 1937. Her career in church work dates back 27 years to the time when, as a girl of 17, she started a Sunday school at Point Pleasant, W. Va. She and her husband came to live in Marion in 1924.

On the Great White Way

A SERMONETTE
By REV. D. N. KELLY
Pastor, Wesley Methodist Church
Text, Genesis 5, 24: "And Enoch Walked With God."

IT IS not irreligious for us to speak in this familiar way about God. Or to attribute to him a trait that is so human as that in the text. It is difficult to conceive of God only in human terms. It is also true that we are better able to know Him in the same way. Calvin has said: "Man can only know himself through his knowledge of God, and can only know God through the knowledge of himself."

We may use the poetical expression, "Up through nature to God," but it will require more than nature to reveal God to us. The way to God through nature, at best is a "Dirt" road. Rough, dusty, marshy, many ruts.

We should never forget that the way to God is still open. He should be as real to this generation as He was to those in the time of the text. In one of the great papers of a few years ago, appeared a cartoon. It represented a long cabin close to the base of a high mountain. On the top of the mountain was the White House. A ladder was seen resting on the side of the mountain, extending from the cabin to the mansion on the mountain top. The cartoon was explained by this sentence: "The ladder is still there." It was used on Lincoln's birthday. It has a larger significance. The ladder that reaches from earth to heaven is still there. Acess to God is within the reach of man.

All who have been born into the Kingdom of God are vitally related. Christian people are not merely adopted into the family of God, but they are born into the family. They then are heirs to all that the Father owns Also joint heirs with Jesus Christ. We may be richer than we believe. In southwest Virginia, a farmer could scarcely make a living on his farm. A stranger came and after walking over the farm offered him $1,000 for it. He moved to the little town. Men began to work the land, and opened the Pocahontas coal field, and it is worth millions today.

They walked together. They can not walk together unless they are likeminded. We do not know what they talked about. No doubt it was on the great themes of Life and Destiny.

The difference between folks is determined by the degree that Christ dominates the life Mr. Babson was the guest of the president of the Argentine republic. He said to Mr. Babson, "Why is it that South America with all its natural resources, is so far behind North America?" "Mr. President what do you think?" "I have come to this conclusion. South America was settled by Spanish who came here in search of gold. North America was settled by Pilgrim Fathers who went there in search of God."

The great white way is not alway free from the experiences that are common to all. The journey of Enoch was on this earth. The great events in the Bible took place on this planet. The appeal that is made is for the enlistment of real heroes in the service of the King. Blucher and his Prussian troops were on their way to help Wellington conquer Napoleon. Some wanted to turn back, but Blucher said I have given Wellington my word that I would help him. You will not make me break it.

To reach in safety the end of the "Great White Way" should be the ambition of all. God has made this a possibility. The Bishop of Durham said:—"A Christ who is not quite God is a broken bridge at the other end." The purpose of the Church is to make world conditions conform to the Christ plan of life. The London County Council many years ago did a great work. They bought the old slum district at a great cost. They laid out a new street from Southampton Row and Fleet street, cleared away all the filth and laid out a broad beautiful street called, "The King's Way."

WHEAT CROP FATE DOUBTFUL

Extent of Damage to Grain Plants Won't Be Known Until Spring.

By The Associated Press

[illegible], Jan. 20 — A protective blanket of snow and the [illegible] winter today hid the [illegible] 1940 United States winter wheat crop, an important [illegible] in agriculture's [illegible].

[illegible] the crop's unusually [illegible] grain men believe al[illegible] anything can happen. [illegible] wheat plants, many weak [illegible] normally vigorous, now [illegible] dormant beneath the snow, [illegible] out of their winter [illegible] in a few weeks, green up [illegible] nourishment of ample [illegible] and produce a fair [illegible].

On the other hand, the very [illegible] prospect during fall [illegible] early winter prior to Christ[illegible] rains which brought relief [illegible] the drouth in the southwest, [illegible] become worse. More than [illegible] rainfall will be needed [illegible] many areas to bring wheat to [illegible], experts believe.

Most agronomists do not expect a normal harvest, even with perfect weather henceforth. Now they are concerned with possible damage cold weather may do to weakened plants, especially where snow covering is insufficient, but most danger lies in alternate freezing and thawing which expands and contracts roots and breaks their structure. Much wheat has not yet sprouted above ground or germinated and there is no telling the fate of this. If it gets an early spring start, is favored with mild weather and plenty of rain and does not meet late winter frosts it may produce some wheat. These are big "ifs" in agronomists' language.

Wheat producers in the southwest, where the bulk of the surplus hard winter crop is raised, have not given up hope. Some here been drilling seed into the snow. Much volunteer wheat has sprouted on many acres where last year's harvest shattered and scattered grain in the soil. Grain men point out that wheat is a very sturdy plant. Conditions are much better in the soft winter wheat belt to the east and in the Ohio valley, where moisture conditions have been more favorable.

Preliminary estimates made a month or more ago, before moisture relief came to the southwest, indicated a 1940 winter wheat crop of 400,000,000 bushels or less was in prospect compared with 563,000,000 bushels produced in 1939.

ODDS ON G.O.P. RACE DIFFICULT

Ten or More Candidates Hard To Place in Pre-Primary Contest.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 — Republican political forecasters are finding it difficult to fix the "winter book" odds on the ten or more G. O. P. candidates already in the presidential nomination race.

Although most of the "bookies" rate Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio and Thomas E. Dewey, New York district attorney, as the "favorites" at this stage, they say many things can happen to change the order of advance listings.

One of these is the type of candidate put up by the Democrats. For example, the chart readers say, should President Roosevelt seek a third term or be drafted for a third term race, it might be necessary to narrow the mythical odds on one or the other of the three already mentioned or put a "dark horse" higher up on the entry roster.

If candidates were rated by their own statements—avowed or receptive—the odds would be easy to determine. But, as the experts say, the winner is more often the one who sits and waits the call of the starter, in this case the national convention.

Vandenberg, editor and author, who once said he would give a "dog bites man" interview on how a "newspaper-senator looks at the senate press gallery," but has yet to get around to it, is placed in the "very receptive" rather than "avowed" class.

On May 29, 1939, he told Michigan that he would accept the nomination if it came to him, but would not actively seek it.

"If there are subsequent responsibilities of a broader nature, I shall meet them to the best of my ability."

He also said the successful candidate should be pledged to serve but one term in the White House so as to be "manifestly free of all incentive but the one job of saving America."

Early this month Vandenberg whole Walter Fess, Republican state chairman of Kansas, he did not consider himself to be a candidate "in the usual sense of that word."

"I have indicated my willingness to serve in this terrific responsibility, but I have also indicated that I have absolutely no personal aspirations in this direction and that I shall not personally participate in any pre-convention campaign for delegates."

$45 IN UNCLAIMED FEES LISTED HERE

Clerk of Courts Carl F. Huberman would like to get rid of $45.

In fact he has made considerable effort to locate some 60 people, all of whom have small claims against common pleas court for witness and notary fees.

The funds have been unclaimed over the past several years by persons who either served as witnesses or notarized papers filed in court. The amounts owed range from $5 to 20 cents, but most of them are for 80 cents, the present charge for notarizing papers.

A complete list of persons to whom the money is due has been compiled and posted on the bulletin board at the courthouse. Any fees still unclaimed after 30 days will be turned over to the County Treasurer Homer D. Cole for the general fund.

HALIFAX PROMISES HELP FOR FINLAND

By The Associated Press

LEEDS, Eng., Jan. 20—(Via Radio)—Lord Halifax, British secretary for foreign affairs, assured an international radio audience today that England's promise to help Finland "will not remain an idle promise, a mere academic formality."

Speaking from the Leeds town hall, Lord Halifax said he had no doubt that the "prayers of the world" were going up for the Finns in their war with Russia.

Discussing the conflict between the allies and Germany, the British foreign secretary indicated a belief that Adolf Hitler would have become the dictator of all Europe if England had not continued its rearmament program even after the Munich settlement.

As he sees it, Halifax said, Germany's only chance of winning the war was by doing it at once.

Discusses Labor Problems

Speaking directly to the foremen about labor problems he urged them to stop "little troublesome things" among their men and in their plant. "Those little things condition a man so that when he blows off steam he has a listening few who take it up and things start to happen."

Each foreman who has 20 men under him influences 250 people in his community through his work, his home, his church and his lodge, Mr. Horrocks said. "If you begin to say things are right in this country you'll begin to hear it from other sources and that is the way we are going to give this country peace of mind," he told the foremen.

Mr. Horrocks was introduced by Thomas Maidens, chairman of the program committee. Both Mr. Maidens and Charles Tracht, president of the club, gave short welcomes. Mr. Tracht introduced the following officers and committee chairmen: J. C. Findley, vice president; L. E. Simonis secretary; C. E. Flowers, safety chairman, and Roy Sharrock, flower chairman. Herman Wiener, treasurer, and C. W. Chase of the auditing committee, could not be present. Mr. Evans, national secretary gave a brief talk.

Music during the dinner was furnished by the Manhattan Troubadors from Cleveland, composed of Freddy Dister, vocal soloist and cellist, Ray Challingsworth, accordion, Bill Seifert, guitar and Otto Horn, bass viol and comedian.

Entertainment and Dance

After Mr. Horrock's talk they entertained with a half-hour skit of Dutch, Irish and novelty numbers, done in costume, and at 10:45 they began playing for dancing.

The men are all World war veterans and Mr. Dister and Mr. Horn stayed over last night to be present for the V. F. W. mid-winter conference here today and Sunday. They served with Mr. Tracht in the 135 Field Artillery, 37th Division.

Attending were W. F. Long, superintendent of the Galion Iron Works & Mfg. Co. at which the club is organized, and Mrs. Long; I. S. Perry of Mansfield who is a member of the national membership committee and a former national vice president; R. E. Vanatta of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. at Barberton; Mr. and Mrs. Evans and Mrs. Marian Forsho of Akron; Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Findley, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Maidens, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Horn, Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Fulton, Thomas A. Carmean, James E. Erfurt, Roy R. Miller, Miss Elizabeth Miller, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Alder and Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Ness.

State Funeral Planned for Sen. Borah

30 years, said death came over Borah like a deep slumber.

Borah was known among his colleagues as an isolationist on questions of foreign policy. But he constantly reiterated that his views sprang from a basic desire to keep this country out of war.

In his personal relations, the Idaho senator was courteous and kind but still managed to keep pretty much to himself.

He often lunched alone in the senate's private dining room, but he never failed to welcome those who wished to sit and chat.

The gray-maned senator, called for years "the Lion of Idaho," fought many a lost cause but was the winner of some.

Burial in Boise

His lone-wolf attitude showed up in many ways. While other senators worked for days to line up support before introducing a bill, he never consulted his colleagues before proposing a measure. Few of his major legislative suggestions ever were enacted.

Burial will be in Boise. Even as the funeral plans were being formulated there was speculation as to Borah's successor. There was talk in Boise that Governor Bottolfsen might resign preparing the way for his own appointment to the vacancy by Lieutenant-Governor Donald Whitehead.

There also was discussion in political circles of the possibility that Mrs. Borah might be named to fill her husband's seat until this year's November election.

Borah married Mary McConnell, a daughter of a former Idaho governor, when he was 30.

Mrs. Borah was reported to have held up bravely during her husband's losing fight for life. She cried when death came, but was able to converse with close friends who came to express their sorrow.

London Papers Comment

Although Borah's death had been anticipated, London newspapers stopped their presses to carry the news of his passing.

The Daily Express said Borah would be remembered as "a bitter critic of Britain" but added that "we should not forget that all Americans shared his creed: America First."

The Daily Mail commented that Borah was better known to the average Briton than any other American except the President.

When Borah died, his apartment house switchboard was unable to handle the calls of those who wanted to express their sympathy to Mrs. Borah. Earlier, hundreds of persons had called his home and his office to say they were praying for his recovery.

In his six terms in the senate, Borah held a prominent position in Republican politics though he disdained party considerations in deciding his attitude toward legislation.

He recently remarked that the only questions he wanted answered regarding any legislation was whether it was "to the best interests of the United States."

For those whom he admired (Vice President Garner, Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) and Senator Pittman (D-Nev.) were among them) Borah had an unvarying comment: "He is a great American.

Devoted To Principles

Life-long devotion to a few cherished principles and implacable opposition to others he disapproved characterized the career of William Edgar Borah of Idaho, whose more than 30 years in the United States senate covered two of the most crucial periods of American history.

Throughout his life in Washington he crusaded against great combinations of wealth and industrial control, and championed the cause of states rights while in international affairs he tenaciously pursued a rigid policy of no foreign entanglements. The defeat of efforts to put the United States into the League of Nations and the World court was due in no small part to his opposition.

Politically, the "Lion of Idaho" held an underlying belief in the theory of government by party and though his own ideals sometimes ran contrary to the tenets of organized Republicanism he never renounced his party affiliation, preferring instead of trying to swing the party around to what he considered his more liberal views.

When Borah first left mountainous Idaho to take a senate seat in 1907, an historic chapter in American statesmanship began.

Equipped with courage, blunt independence and limitless vitality, he was to become an American institution and an international figure. A gift for oratory and a penetrating mind helped the young senator capture a place in the spotlight that he did not relinquish during his lifetime.

Oldest Senate Member

He saw administrations come and go. Shifting political winds in his home state left him untouched. At the end of his career, extending through the World war years and the economic upheaval of the early 1930's, he was the oldest member of the senate in point of service, the chamber's acknowledged authority on constitutional law and probably its most-feared adversary in debate.

Some Republican colleagues looked askance at many of the forthright Borah's more liberal views.

In 1936 he demanded "liberalization" of the G.O.P., denounced the "Old Guard" leadership and asked for the presidential nomination. The convention chose Governor Landon of Kansas, and Borah announced "I have no intention of bolting the ticket," and added, "I am supporting the platform and I have been supporting the platform from the beginning."

Although he broke with President Hoover before the 1932 campaign, Borah did not take the stump for either presidential candidate in that race.

In congress, the long-maned Idahoan left the imprint of his power on a succession of important laws that carried out his social and economic views. Many another legislative effort died aborning because of Borah's relentless opposition.

As chairman of the senate foreign relations committee he was a power to be reckoned with on matters of international policy during the pre-Roosevelt years.

He teamed with Senator Hiram Johnson (R-Calif.) to lead the fight against American participation in the League of Nations and the World court, delivering during that debate what many students called one of the greatest speeches in the history of the senate.

As a member of the senate judiciary committee he helped in 1937 to defeat the President's plan for reorganizing the supreme court. He prepared what might have been one of the most important speeches of his career, but in the swift turn of events that killed the measure his attack was never delivered.

Although during the Roosevelt administrations Borah's minority affiliation stripped him of much influence, he always commanded an attentive audience and a well-filled chamber when he took the senate floor.

Voice Cut Like Knife

He spoke rapidly with curt gestures. His voice had a rasping, metallic edge that could cut like a knife when he was aroused.

Borah came to the senate during the administration of trust-busting Theodore Roosevelt, and he became an implacable foe of monopoly. Frequently he expressed disillusionment with political parties repeatedly made monopoly an important issue, then failed to go as far as he wanted to go.

In 1937 he teamed with Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming, a younger Democratic colleague, to propose that the federal government control monopoly by requiring interstate corporations to obtain federal charters.

When the administration subsequently asked that a study be made to prepare for monopoly legislation, Vice President Garner made Borah a member of a special committee to conduct the investigation.

In the later years of his career Borah aided southern senators in beating off efforts to pass an anti-lynching bill, terming such a proposal unconstitutional and a violation of state rights. He favored establishment of a minimum wage by federal law but did not entirely agree with the administration of the proper approach to the question. He assailed administration farm legislation as a "policy of scarcity", and was equally bitter in opposing the 1938 naval expansion program.

He supported the prohibition amendment and was a stout crusader for the primary system.

Borah had been in the senate only a few months before he was asked to help frame the Republican platform upon which William Howard Taft made a successful campaign for the presidency.

Opposed Trade Treaties

He opposed a Taft-approved reciprocity treaty with Canada on the ground it opened the American market to Canadian agriculture, and he opposed reciprocal trade policies of the Roosevelt administration on the same ground.

In the first years of his senatorship he chalked up to his credit a $20,000,000 reclamation appropriation, one of the earliest; put through the three-year homestead law; had much western farm land opened to settlement, joined the fight for the income tax and the constitutional amendment that permitted it; and advocated legislation which provided for direct election of senators.

Later, he fought for abolition of tax exemptions on public securities and salaries. He became one of the leading proponents of child-labor legislation.

He piloted through a bill creating the department of labor and the children's bureau.

In international affairs Borah followed a strict policy of no foreign entanglements and advocated prompt, direct action on matters affecting American interests.

Borah championed United States recognition of Soviet Russia, despite criticism from within his own party, and was vigorous in denunciation of foreign governments he considered "dictatorships."

Explains Russian Stand

He explained his Russian attitude in March, 1931, when he said:

"I would establish normal relations with the Russian government. In doing so I would not indorse that government or the communistic theory, but I would have no fear of contact with it."

He was a firm believer in maintaining the balance among the executive, legislative and judicial branches of the government as set up in the federal constitution and fought measures which he deemed in conflict with that principle or which threatened to invade state rights. Thus, although he favored votes for women, he opposed the federal suffrage amendment, holding it was a matter of state legislation. On much the same ground he voted against the child labor amendment.

Immediately after the World war he began a campaign for the release of political prisoners. He opposed American military occupation of Haiti and San Domingo and advocated a small army and general disarmament.

He was known as a friend of labor and initiated several senate investigations of working conditions in the coal and steel industries. Also he was an advocate of economy and largely on that ground opposed the soldier bonus system. He was a foe of high tariffs and fought Canadian reciprocity.

One of the first to sense the breaking down of party lines, he nevertheless would have no part in third party movements. Two parties, he held, was the ideal arrangement for the American system of government.

Satisfied To Be Senator

After he became senator, Borah never sought any other office. In 1896 he was an unsuccessful candidate for the house of representatives as a free silver Republican Bryanite. Then in 1903 he ran for the senatorship, receiving 22 of the necessary 26 Idaho legislative votes for that office. It was related that he refused a "trade" at that time which might have given him the needed margin. Four years later he won the post and the legislature reelected him in January, 1913. He won popular majorities in the November elections of 1918, 1924 and 1930.

He virtually declined the vice presidential nomination with Coolidge in 1924 and turned down earlier an opportunity to become Republican leader of the senate under Harding.

Senator Borah was a lawyer by profession. He was born at Fairfield, Ill. on June 29, 1865, went through Southern Illinois Academy and studied law at the University of Kansas. He was admitted to the bar in 1889, began practice at Lyons, Kan., moved to Boise, Idaho, in 1891 and won broad plaudits as an advocate a few years later when he was special prosecutor in the celebrated trial of Haywood, Pettibone and Moyer. They were officials of the Western Federation of Miners, accused of having caused the assassination of Frank Steunenberg, former governor of Idaho.

When he went to the senate he already had a reputation as an orator, but it was years later before the country was to see the full cope of his forensic powers. During the historic fight over the League of Nations, he attracted wide attention by the clarity of his arguments and the force of his delivery.

In the national capital, he took little part in the social life, preferring to spend his leisure hours with a book or on solitary horseback rides in Rock Creek Park. He was a total abstainer from alcoholic drinks, tobacco, coffee and tea.

Mrs. Borah was frequently in the society headlines, entertaining foreign dignitaries who never missed seeing her husband on visits to Washington.

The senator was greatly moved by and grateful for the efforts of the public health service in 1932 in rushing serum to save the life of Mrs Borah who became ill with parrott fever in Boise.

Borah's influence in both domestic and foreign affairs was long a puzzle to orthodox politicians. Early in his senate career he was regarded as a potential presidential candidate, his independence being interpreted as a bid for popular support that would force him to the head of the ticket.

But as he pursued his untrammeled way he finally became accepted as one who was sincere in the belief, as he himself worded it, that "a public man should not be bound by his party on big or fundamental questions."

Presidents Ask His Aid

Thus he became a sort of oracle and his almost daily interviews with newspapermen became an institution. He seldom had timely news to give out, but as a student of principles he furnished a wealth of background material for complicated situations both at home and abroad.

Recognized as an exponent of progressive thought within as well as without the Republican party, Borah had a wide political influence and successive presidents sought to enlist him as a lieutenant. In each case he declined.

Soon after Warren G. Harding moved from the senate to the White House, he asked Borah to be administration leader in the senate, arguing that what the party needed at that juncture was better team work in congress. Explaining that he could not surrender his own political opinions, Senator Borah said:

"Mr. President, you can get along without me, but I cannot get along without my views."

Perhaps no other senator was consulted as frequently by President Coolidge as was Borah in those days early in the Coolidge administration when the senate inaugurated drives upon cabinet officers after cabinet officer. It was he who took the lead among Republicans in advising the dismissal of Harry M. Daugherty as attorney general during the senate investigation of oil lands on the ground that Daugherty had lost public confidence.

When the time came for the President to cast about for a running mate in 1924 he and his advisers agreed upon Borah as the man who could command progressive support in the face of the LaFollette campaign.

Summoned to the White House from his customary morning horseback ride in Rock Creek park to be advised of the decision, Borah declined the honor. Political gossip at the time had it that when the President invited the senator to run on the national ticket with him, Borah asked, "At which end, Mr. President?" But this never was authenticated.

Advocates Peace

While opposing with all his power what he regarded as a departure from the American policy against "entangling alliances" with Europe, Borah was a staunch advocate of world peace.

Many of his friends gave him credit for having initiated the movement for the Washington arms conference of 1921-22, the idea having found legislative expression before President Harding entered the White House.

The 5-5-3 naval limitation treaty which grew out of this conference he regarded as a long step toward international peace, but he did not approve the four-power treaty among the United States, Great Britain, Japan, and France respecting their Pacific possessions. He also believed that the work of the arms conference should have been supplemented by that of an economic conference. His efforts, however, to have such a gathering called were without success

SENATE MAPS OWN DEFENSE BILL CUTS

Committee Acts To Slash Emergency Appropriation.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20—A senate committee drew its paring knife today on the emergency defense appropriation in the congressional drive to go President Roosevelt one better on curtailing federal expenditures.

Predictions were freely made in advance of a senate appropriations committee meeting that the full committee would back up a $13,000,000 slash made by a subcommittee in a $264,611,252 money measure, already approved by the house, for use of the army, navy, coast guard and federal bureau of investigation.

The money was asked by the President to implement United State neutrality and to strengthen this country's first lines of defense. The senate committee cut would bring the total reduction, below budget estimates, to approximately $20,000,000.

The army and navy bore the brunt of reductions made by the subcommittee, although there were small cuts made in coast guard funds. Money for increasing the FBI's anti-spy and sabotage staff was understood to have been left intact.

The subcommittee was reported to have cut out approximately $6,875,000 sought for the purchase of 81 short range navy patrol planes for coastal defense and neutrality patrol work.

FIRES

fied Mrs. Ramsey and summoned the fire department.

Approximately $200 damage resulted at the Lewis Gould home at 465 Mound street shortly before midnight when an overheated chimney ignited flooring. A partition on the first floor of the home was burned and the interior of the house and furnishings were damaged by smoke.

The two calls brought to four the number of fires during the day which firemen said were due indirectly to the extremely cold weather. Earlier in the day overheated chimneys resulted in approximately $4,000 damage to the office of Dr. Thomas H. Sutherland on South State street and minor damage to a West Side residence.

In the two calls late yesterday firemens' clothing was frozen and ladders and other fire apparatus were covered with ice. Firemen from the West Side and North Side stations fought the fire at the Ramsey home for more than two hours while the West Side firemen were at the Gould home more than an hour.

Four Die, Three Hurt in Two Ohio Fires

By The Associated Press

Four persons were killed and three were injured in two Ohio fires early today, while three burned to death in a small rural home near Pontiac, Mich.

Two children perished in a fire that swept a small country home at Wintersville, five miles west of Steubenville. They were Virginia Lee Hess, 7, and her three-year-old brother, Owen James.

Their mother, Mrs. O. J. Hess, took four children to safety but said the swift spread of flames prevented her returning for the two others.

Mrs. Hess and the rescued children, wearing only light night clothing and barefooted, walked a quarter mile in snow to the home of a neighbor.

The father and husband was in Steubenville to enter a hospital for an operation.

Fire started by an overheated bedroom stove swept through a frame home and grocery building in Middletown, killing a 19-year-old girl and her 3-year-old sister and injuring three other members of the family.

Opal Ballard and her baby sister, Thelma, were burned to death. Their mother, Mrs. Stella Ballard, 41, suffered minor burns, concussion, and broken arm when she leaped from a second-story window. Lois, 5, and Edward, 15, the other children, escaped with slight burns.

The blaze also destroyed a three-room cottage and a garage adjoining. Assistant Fire Chief Ralph Reed estimated damage at $7,500.

Three persons burned to death in a fire which destroyed a small rural home in Waterford township near Pontiac, Mich. Lewis Stegner, 33; his wife, Alice, 24, and their 14-months old son, Phillip, lost their lives.

Neighbors carried 80-year-old J. W. Johnston, an invalid, from his burning home at Canfield, Mahoning county, last night.

CRIME DRAMA OPENS AT OHIO

George Raft and Humphrey Bogart Starred in "Invisible Stripes."

"Invisible Stripes," based on a book by Lewis E. Lawes, came to the Ohio yesterday for four days. The theme is the case of an ex-convict who wants to go straight.

George Raft plays the role. Contrast is used to dramatic effect by drawing a parallel between the lives of two men who come out of prison on the same day, Raft, and Humphrey Bogart, a confirmed criminal. Bogart is cynical enough to realize that it is only a matter of time until he returns to the big house and he returns to his former life, intending to enjoy his very ill-gotten gains while he may.

Finds Reform Difficult

Raft returns to his decent, hard-working family, anxious to find a job and be able to marry his sweetheart as soon as he has finished his parole. His sweetheart refuses to marry an ex-convict. Although he is able to find work his jobs last only until his employers learn he is on parole. The futility of his efforts to go straight in a world that has branded him with invisible stripes becomes apparent to Raft and he joins Bogart and his gang.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Olina Told She May Get Role "Under Certain Conditions."

PURPOSELY I waited for several seconds before answering Princess Olina's query. I was driving a bargain with her, and I did not intend her to think I would be too easily won over to her request.

"Yes, I can see it," I said at last, "and while I cannot agree with you that it would add materially to the effectiveness of the scene, there is one thing certain: it would not detract from it. Indeed, speaking judicially, and without bias one way or the other, I think it would enhance the effect a little"

I stopped short, and there was distinct uneasiness in Olina's lustrous eyes as she scanned my face

"Does that mean that you will give me my chance?" she queried a bit melodramatically.

"Not so fast, my dear," I answered "Even if I decided to give you the role, I cannot promise that Mr. Veritzen will accept my decision; he guards access to his ranks most jealously"

Veritzen's Approval Needed

"I don't think you need hesitate on that account," she said confidently "I am sure he will give me the chance I crave."

"But not without my approval," I answered, then went on swiftly. "There is also your mother's consent to be obtained. Does she know about this wish of yours?"

"Not unless you told her," Olina said sulkily.

"Then you would better tell her, at once, and ask her permission to go through with the scheme, before you speak to Mr. Veritzen about it," I said, carefully skirting any betrayal of the fact that Olga and I had talked of Olina's desire for a role in the play.

"I'll tell her the first chance I get," she said, "but I don't believe she'll object. But—I thought —couldn't you?" — she stopped, confused

"You mean," I said, "couldn't I tell Mr. Veritzen what you wish, and ask him to give you the role, telling him that I am willing to write it in for you?"

"Yes, that is what I meant," she said, and her eyes were fixed uneasily upon my face, over which I purposely had drawn a mask of sternness.

"I can do those things" I said slowly, "and I will do them, under certain conditions"

Her lips were suddenly stiff and dry, and I knew that she anticipated what was coming.

"Look here, my dear," I began in the same manner that I would have used to Mary or Marion, "there are certain things which I must say to you now, and to which I wish you would listen calmly"

"I — will — listen," she said slowly.

"You can be happy—or unhappy —in the future," I began. "At present you are a bit warped mentally, but I realize as well as any one that there is plenty of reason for that because of what you have endured But your mother has been through as much as you, and she has preserved a wonderful spirit and outlook upon life"

She stirred resentfully, and I knew that she was thinking of the imminent prospect of her mother's marrying Philip Veritzen.

Reveals She Knew Plan

"But even though you have suffered much, though not as much as your mother," I went relentlessly on, "there is no excuse for some of the things you have done. For instance, that trick you tried to play on your mother in your conversation with Mr Veritzen."

Her face was suddenly aflame.

"What trick?" she queried defensively.

"You know very well," I answered; planning to have Mr. Veritzen surprise your mother with a call, knowing that at that hour in the morning she would not be dressed to receive visitors. That was not worthy of you, Olina."

The red in her face deepened to the ugly hue of brick.

"Does Mother know?" she asked quickly.

"You already know she knows," I replied shortly.

"Of course you told her," she retorted.

"I told her Mr. Veritzen was coming," I said, "but I did not need tell her about the trick you had planned. She had overheard you, and she said that she thought you were planning, in the American vernacular, to 'put one over on Mother'."

Boston Wool

By The Associated Press

BOSTON, Jan. 20—The Boston wool market was somewhat more active this week than in the previous week. The greater portion of the trade, however, was on foreign wools from South Africa and South America. Price trends were mixed in foreign wools with fine merinos and coarse cross-breds showing some advance while grades in between were slightly easier. Quotations on domestic wools were about steady on fine grades and inclined to ease on coarser wools. Greasy combing graded bright fleece wools were quoted at 39 to 42 cents in the grease for fine delaine; at 40 to 42 cents for halfbloods and at 44 to 45 cents, in the grease, for three-eighths and quarterblood.

MARKET SHOWS LITTLE POWER

Leaders Shuffle Over Irregular Price Course in Today's Trading.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 — Indecision gripped the stock market today and, except for a few favorites, the general run of leaders shuffled over a slightly irregular route.

Speculative contingents apparently had little in the way of stimulating news to go on, although there were several fairly cheerful items in the day's budget.

Brokerage quarters were coming to the conclusion many potential buyers were holding off because of threatened foreign liquidation. Pressure from overseas was believed to have acted as a brake on prices.

The pace was relatively slow, even though blocks of 3,000 to 10,000 shares of such low-quoted stocks as Commonwealth & Southern frequently made their appearance, usually at Friday's final levels.

Further signs of recession in a number of industrial lines were seen as a share recovery handicap. Steels, especially, lacked rising vigor as next week's steel output was expected to show another decline. Motors were unresponsive.

Standard Gas & Electric preferreds on the "big board" and bonds in the curb retrieved a portion of this week's losses as talk was heard of the SEC investigating the unusually sharp drop in this group.

Among resistant shares were Montgomery Ward, Great Northern, Pennsylvania, Westinghouse and General Electric. In arrears most of the time were U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler Douglas Aircraft, Anaconda, Kennecott, Du Pont, Loft and Standard Brands.

Bonds and commodities were hesitant the greater part of the day.

COLLISION OF CRACK TRAINS INJURES TWO

Engineer Misjudges Distance in Stop Near Cleveland.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 20—New York Central officials today blamed a misjudgment of distance for a collision of two passenger trains which shook up nearly 100 persons, injured 13 slightly, and sent two to hospitals.

The Cincinnati section of the road's Southwestern limited crashed into the rear of the Commodore Vanderbilt, which had stopped for an inspection of sticking brakes, last night at nearby Wickliffe.

A. E. Lloyd, assistant general manager, said Engineer John Hunt gave this account:

"I was running five minutes behind the Vanderbilt and got two caution signals. I went on through, slowing down to 35 miles an hour (approved speed through yellow caution lights).

"A quarter of a mile west of Lloyd road I saw a flare (set up by a brakeman sent back from the first train.) I saw a red stop light and set the emergency brakes. I thought we'd get stopped all right but I must have misjudged the distance because we were going about 10 miles an hour when we hit."

Lloyd said the crash caused little damage to equipment.

August Austin, 24, of Chicago, a dining car employe, suffered internal and back injuries, and Ellsworth Harris, 21, of Springfield, O., a U. S. army private, shoulder injuries.

Several other persons were treated at the scene and 100 passengers were examined and given aid at the Cleveland terminal before boarding other trains.

The Vanderbilt was bound for Boston and the limited for New York. The wreck held up the Century and other passenger trains about 40 minutes.

It was the second recent Ohio collision for the Vanderbilt. On July 31, 1938, 31 persons were injured as it rammed the observation car of the streamlined Mercury at Rocky Bridge, 22 miles east of Toledo.

WHEAT REGAINS PART OF OPENING LOSSES

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Jan. 20 — Wheat prices dropped about a cent a bushel in early trading today and then spent the rest of the session in a slow rally which eventually wiped out practically all of the loss.

The unsettled trade reflected selling inspired by milder temperatures over most of the belt and uncertainty regarding producer plans in connection with large quantities of 1938 and 1939 grain now held in storage under government loans.

Reports indicated spring wheat belt wheat moisture conditions had been improved by recent snows but from some sections of the Ohio alley came advices that snow covering was inadequate over parts of the soft winter wheat belt and that the cold wave was regarded as a threat to the crop.

Wheat closed unchanged to ¼ lower compared with yesterday, May $1.01⅛-¼, July 98¾-½; corn unchanged to ⅛ higher, May 58⅝-½, July 58⅝; oats unchanged to ⅛ down.

PRESIDENT TALKS ON CHILD WELFARE

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20—President Roosevelt told a group of social planners last night that "the federal treasury has some bottom to it" and that "mere handouts" would not cure the plight of America's poorer children and their families.

Average incomes of the poor should be raised, he said, and each community should be taxed according to its ability to pay.

Mr. Roosevelt said that he agreed with members of the White House conference on children in a democracy that "we still have much to do" and that "public assistance of many kinds is necessary."

In the course of his address the President eulogized as "a great American" the late Senator Borah, who wrote the 1912 law creating the children's bureau, sponsor of the White House conference.

VICTORY OVER FINNS CLAIMED BY RUSSIA

Moscow Reports on Battle in Lake Ladoga Area.

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW, Jan. 20—The Russian army reported today it had "annihilated" a Finnish battalion on the north shore of Lake Ladoga and inflicted "numerous casualties" on the enemy on the Karelian isthmus.

A communique from the Leningrad headquarters, distributed by Tass, Soviet official news agency, declared:

"In the Petrozavodsk direction, in the area of Kitela, our reconnoitering group annihilated an enemy battalion which left 26 machine guns on the spot."

The report added "the enemy suffered numerous casualties" in clashes of advanced units on the isthmus front. It said Soviet bombers raided military objectives in a number of areas.

(The Finns said fighting continued on the Salla front where Finnish forces and Swedish volunteer airmen were reported harassing 40,000 Russians in retreat around Karkajarvi. The Finnish comunique reported the capture of "a few enemy positions" northeast of Lake Ladoga. Unofficial Finnish sources estimated the Russians had lost 204 planes and 434 tanks and armored cars during the seven weeks of the war.)

BRITAIN SAYS FINNS CAN WIN WITH HELP

Conclude Country Will Need 30,000 Men, 200 Planes.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Jan. 20 — Given 30,000 more fighting men, 200 airplanes and a generous supply of military equipment before May, Finland can save herself from Soviet Russia, British military authorities concluded today.

In line with a growing belief that Finland is the pivot of the entire struggle against what Britons call "aggression in Europe," Great Britain and France have been making substantial contributions to Finland, including planes and military supplies, but the amounts have been kept secret.

The military experts' prediction was founded on close study of the campaign in northern Finland, where they said one of history's most notable displays of tactical skill had thrown back the Russian invaders.

It was agreed generally that May would bring the ultimate turning point. It is then that the snows melt and the ground becomes firm enough for best use of the Soviet mechanical equipment.

MOTHER REFUSES TO GIVE UP CHILD

By The Associated Press

MT. VERNON, O., Jan. 20 — Faced with a woman's refusal to surrender her four-year-old daughter to the child's foster parents, Knox county officials sought to unravel the family tangle at a conference today.

The woman, Mrs. Doris Nutter, 25, is free under $1,000 bond on a kidnaping charge. Justice Harold A. Bishop ordered her to return the child, Ann, to Mrs. Nutter's sister, Mrs. Clinton Touvell, who with her husband adopted Ann last March. Bishop said Mrs. Nutter defied his order.

Bishop sought advice from Prosecutor William L. Howell and Probate Judge William H. Clarke. The latter approved the adoption, although Mrs. Nutter said she and Ann's father, Lawrence Fawcett, did not give their consent. Mrs. Nutter remarried after her divorce from Fawcett.
